

Weddings at the Transitional Cathedral

New Zealand's newest Cathedral - and the only one in the world to be made substantially of cardboard – could be the venue for your wedding.

The Transitional Cathedral is the Mother Church of the Anglican Diocese of Christchurch, but it hosts all sorts of occasions. It is not a parish church so is not limited to serving people from any one geographic area.

Any couple seeking marriage may apply to be married in the Cathedral and the same conditions that apply to other Anglican churches are followed.

One partner should be baptised in a Christian church and both partners are expected to undertake two sessions of preparation and planning, led by the marriage celebrant who will be one of the priests on the cathedral staff, or another Anglican priest, approved by the Dean of the Cathedral. Services are in the Anglican Tradition, taken from the New Zealand Prayer Book.

The musical resources of the Cathedral (organ, soloists, choir and instrumentalists) may be available on request.

Fees

The basic fee to cover officiating clergy, organist and organ, light, heat and power, cleaning maintenance and security, Verger and custodians is $1,000.00

There are additional fees for soloists, instrumentalists, choristers of the choir, if available.
